Twitter users have various purposes and needs

By JACK RUMMLER

Whether reading the news, interacting around the world or seeking entertainment, Twitter is a booming social media application. It appeals to a desire for entertainment, news and educational purposes.

For the last decade, Twitter's progression allows people to express thoughts for news and entertainment. The simplistic concept of sharing a thought in 140 characters or less is now distributed globally among 320 million people.

New updates such as a poll feature, gif sharing and Periscope broadcasting makes the app more convenient and entertaining by giving information in a timely manner. It allows others to connect on a global or local scale. The social media app lets people share entertaining videos, pictures and thoughts. New worldwide trends appeared in Twitter posts. Junior Joann Mauricette uses Twitter to educate herself to other cultures and social justice issues.

"[Twitter] makes me more aware and accepting of different ideas and makes me a more open person [to different cultures]," Mauricette said. "[I love] social justice, I get other information and it opens me up to events in the Black Lives Matter movement. It empowers Twitter and gives a community aspect."

Twitter also allows users to connect with friends, family and celebrities, and can be used as an entertainment source.

"It gives me something to express what's on my mind and say what I want," senior Bradley Herb said. "I like to tweet things to make people laugh or get them to think 'what is he talking about?'"

Twitter also became a beneficial educational tool. English teacher Jennifer Hilley uses Twitter to post important information to her seniors about homework, events or scholarships.

"I really like microblogging [on Twitter]," Hilley said. "I always put senior announcements and bad jokes on Twitter so kids [will go onto my Twitter] and read them."

The app is an interactive community that aids others and communicates information.
